VRIPACK 60M EXPEDITION VESSEL

A no-nonsense yacht where luxury and adventure enjoy equal billing

Dutch design studio Vripack describe its latest project as a "no-nonsense, go-anywhere boat". It's a refreshingly honest appraisal of a refreshingly simple design. It may not be the prettiest yacht ever to grace the firm's drawing boards but we reckon it could be one of its most successful. A generous 12-metre beam and no less than seven decks of living space give this 60-metre motor yacht a massive amount of accommodation. With the wheelhouse perched on its own up top, the entire sky deck beneath is given over to the owner's suite, including a private lounge, office and aft deck. The main saloon, dining room and media lounge occupy the next deck, while the six double guest suites are sited on the main deck, enjoying the kind of space, big windows and lofty views normally reserved for the owner's suite. That leaves the entire lower deck free for some of the most generous crew accommodation we've seen on any yacht regardless of size.

The bountiful entertaining space is only half the story; the other big selling point is its arsenal of toys and long-range cruising ability. The tall, flared bow and fuel-efficient hull enable this tough steel and aluminium craft to cruise unsupported for 8,000 miles at 12.5 knots. While not technically an ice-class yacht, her enhanced scantlings and rugged steel and aluminium build will make her capable of "nudging ice out of her path". She is to be built at the Derektor yard in Connecticut, US.
